

Prepositions of Time

These prepositions are often used to express when something happens at a specific point in time, near a point in time, or over an extended period of time.

Below is a text in which the use of prepositions such as: in, on, at, before and after is evident.

Wedding Preparations

In a small town on the coast, a wedding is scheduled for Saturday. The ceremony will take place at the picturesque church at 2 PM. Before the wedding, the bride and groom will meet in the park for a brief photo session. After the ceremony, there will be a festive reception at the beachfront hotel, with dinner served at 7 PM. The guests are looking forward to a memorable day, both before and after the wedding.

